

To Whom it May concern;

I am quite discouraged with the actions of Sinclair Broadcasting.

We have allowed communications corporations such as this one to grow and make use of "public airwaves" with a reasonable expectation that they behave in a manner beneficial to the public.

Mandating the airing of a highly partisan political assault on a candidate is a violation of this trust.

Additionally, the actions of Sinclair reflect the worst fears of a monopoly controlling content for its own gains. And doing so over airwaves owned by the public. Where in the FCC's mandate are the controls that prevent such abuse?

Sinclair's actions have galvanized my resolve to to prevent such future violations of the public trust. And further, to reduce the strangle hold such companies have developed under the current FCC rules.

Thankyou
